League of Nations Is Successful Only on 'Little Fellow'

League's History Is A Fine Build-Up, But A Bad Let-Down

THREE HARD JOLTS
Japan, Germany and Italy Have Defied League—But It Continues

This is the second of a series of articles explaining the difficulties of the League of Nations.

By JOSEPH E. SHARKEY

GENEVA.—(AP)—Ardent advocates of the League of Nations frankly are perturbed about the effect upon the organization of the Italian-Ethiopian conflict.

Some of them admitted last autumn, when sanctions were being imposed upon Italy at the aggressor, that the League might survive or slowly perish in accordance with the way it handled the problem. But in those days Rome was hinting about resigning from the League. Now the organization is facing another of its bugaboos, a fact accomplished.

Within recent years it has faced other situations of that ilk. The Japanese severance of Manchuria and Jehol from China, the abrogation of the Versailles treaty provisions against rearmament of Germany and Hitler's military re-occupation of the Rhineland.

Manchoukou Finleo
For the erection of the puppet state of Manchoukou, Japan was solemnly rebuffed and the same thing happened when the Nazis revealed German rearmament. But Manchoukou exists, albeit "unrecognized" save by the Republic of Salvador, and German sentries patrol the right bank of the Rhine.

There have, however, been several definite political successes in League history. Most recent were the squelching of the bitter dispute between Yugoslavia and Hungary growing out of the 1934 assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia, and the handling of the Saar plebiscite which prevented that district from continuing as a bone of contention between France and Germany.

The League also credits itself with helping solve the dispute between Peru and Colombia over the little Amazon settlement of Leticia and with aiding in bringing an end to the Gran Chaco war between Paraguay and Bolivia.

It looks back further to a Grecian-Bulgarian dispute in 1925 when it sent a commission of neutrals to the scene which promptly ended the quarrel. Also in 1923 the League, in collaboration with the allied council of ambassadors, settled conflict growing out of Italian occupation of the Greek island of Corfu.

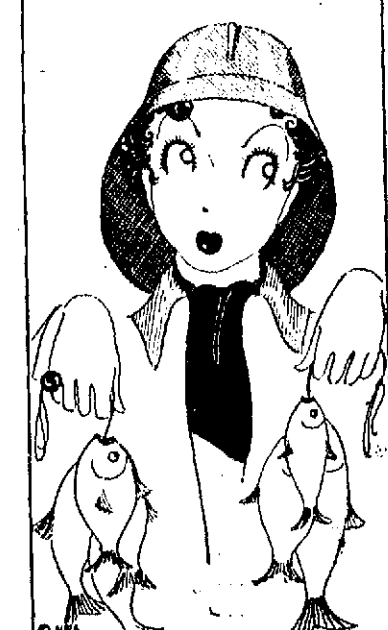

Geneva Initiative
In its early days the League accomplished what is considered a perfect example of successful Geneva initiative by settling ownership of the Aaland Islands as between Sweden and Finland. By June, 1920, this dispute had become acrimonious and Finnish troops were in the archipelago. The League recognized Finnish sovereignty over the 300 islands but arranged to conserve the cultural and political rights of their 26,000 Swedish inhabitants. Then a convention was adopted making the group neutral ground.

But the Polish-Lithuanian quarrel of those same days over the city and region of Vilna, admittedly was a WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The White House announced Saturday that President Roosevelt had signed into law the $572,450,000 supply bill to carry on activities of the Department of War in the fiscal year beginning July 1. This is the largest peace-time appropriation for the nation's land forces.

Sleeping Man Is Slain at Warren

Shotgun Fired Through Window at Night Kills Him Instantly

WARREN, Ark.—(AP)—Albert Barnett, 40, was mysteriously shot to death Friday night as he slept in his home in South Warren, it was discovered Saturday.

A shotgun charge, fired through a window, entered his chest, killing him instantly. Sheriff T. B. Beard said Barnett, recently a relief client, had been charged in 1933 in connection with a fire in which his father and mother burned to death, but he was acquitted in a lengthy trial.

M'Nary Defeats Townsend's Group

Roosevelt Running Behind Borah's Vote in Oregon Primaries

Charles L. McNary, Republican leader in the upper house of congress, defeated two opponents carrying the banners of the Townsend pension plan in primary election returns Friday night from one-ninth of the state's precincts.

The senator, seeking renomination for his fourth term in congress, had 8,699 votes in 183 of 1,627 precincts, to 1,972 for Sam Brown, Gervais farmer and former state senator, and 1,550 for Theodore G. Nelson, Salem, both claimants of Townsend support and advocates of the pension plan.

President Roosevelt, seeking the Democratic nomination without opposition, was trailing Senator William E. Borah, the only Republican presidential candidate on the ballot, in comparative party totals. In 183 precincts, the president received 8,221 votes on the Democratic ticket, while Borah's total was 8,722.

Each major party elected 10 delegates to its national convention. The delegates were legally bound only to use their "best efforts" in behalf of the candidate under whose name they appeared. Henceforth, "best efforts" have consisted of voting for the candidate until the delegation decided its choice had no chance of nomination.

BREMEN, Ohio.—(AP)—The boys of the Bremen high school know about home economics and the girls are proficient with a brace and bit. They traded instruction for two weeks.

O'Neal Is Leading Farm Advocate of the United States

Waldo Frasier Asks for Farmer Attendance Here Next Wednesday

RALLY AT STATION
All-Day Session Expected to Draw Gigantic Crowd to State Farm

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, who will be one of the two featured speakers at a gigantic farmers' rally at the Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment Station here Wednesday, May 20, "has had more to do in shaping and securing the passage of legislation favorable to agriculture than any other individual in the United States," according to a letter received by The Star Saturday from Waldo Frasier, of Little Rock, executive secretary of the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation.

Mr. Frasier's letter follows:

"On Wednesday, May 20, a meeting is to be held for the Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment Station in your county, under the auspices of the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation. On the program for that meeting will appear: Edward A. O'Neal, President, American Farm Bureau Federation; Cully A. Cobb, Director, Southern Region, Agricultural Adjustment Administration; Dan T. Gray, Dean and Director, College of Agriculture, University of Arkansas; and J. F. Tompkins, Burdette, President, Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation.

"We feel that we have been very fortunate to be able to get two outstanding national figures to appear on these programs in the state, to say nothing of the two outstanding Arkansas men who are on the program. Mr. O'Neal has, without a doubt, had more to do in shaping and securing the passage of the large amount of legislation favorable to agriculture passed during the past four years than any other individual in the United States. He is an excellent speaker. You know, of course, of Mr. Cobb and of his devoted service to the cotton farmer since he has been with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

"I would like to ask that you urge as many of your farmer friends as possible to attend this meeting and I most certainly want to extend you a most cordial invitation to attend all, or at least a part, of the meeting.

Democrats Report Donkey Shortage

Brownsville (Texas) Once Found Jackasses Only Too Plentiful

BROWNSVILLE, Texas.—(AP)—This border county, once so well populated with donkeys that certain sections were named for the animals, finds itself donkeyless in a time of need.

A Porter, representative of the Women's Press Association of Washington, D. C., left here recently in disgust after searching the prairies for a dozen donkeys for the Democratic convention at Philadelphia this summer.

One section near Brownsville was named "jackass prairie" because donkeys roamed wild over the lands. Many of the animals were shot and cowboys drove others across the Rio Grande for sale in Mexico.

RALEIGH, N. C.—(AP)—Dr. B. W. Wells, professor of botany at North Carolina State college, expresses the theory that Indian camps were responsible for the "balds" now found on the summits of many wooded southern mountains.

Dr. Wells points out that possibly Indians established summer camps on the tops of certain mountains, and that after the camps were abandoned, oatgrass grew up on the sites.

"Corn King" Firm Believer in Tests

Laboratory Is Secret of Indiana Farmer's Championship

By DILLARD STOKES
UTICA, Ind.—(AP)—The world's "corn king," who won't eat corn on the cob and likes cornbread only in moderation, is doing his scientific best to retain the title he won last year at the Chicago Livestock Exposition.

William Carr Lentz, the 35-year-old "King," has established a two-acre "laboratory" on his 333-acre farm. The rich land has been planted with corn strain of white corn, two varieties of yellow maize, and twelve hybrid strains obtained from the laboratories of Purdue university.

The two-acre experimental plot is in addition to 60 acres of land dedicated to growing Lentz's regular crop, which he hopes will total 2,000,000 ears. This harvest will be combed for the ten best ears which will be entered in the Chicago exhibition next fall.

The "corn king" is pushing his experiments in test tubes as well as furrows. Since January he has been testing his soil with his own equipment designed for the job. Lentz's only child, Thomas Carr, 5 years old, whose ambition is to become "a corn king just like my daddy," is an ardent assistant soil tester.

Lentz made it clear that he is not an amateur farmer, tilling the soil for pastime, but a business man, who works his own land, with the assistance of hired men. While not college trained he keeps closely in touch with agricultural experiment work at Purdue and is an exponent of modern methods. Tractors drag his plows, harrows and his grass cutter. Most of his stationary machinery is motor driven.

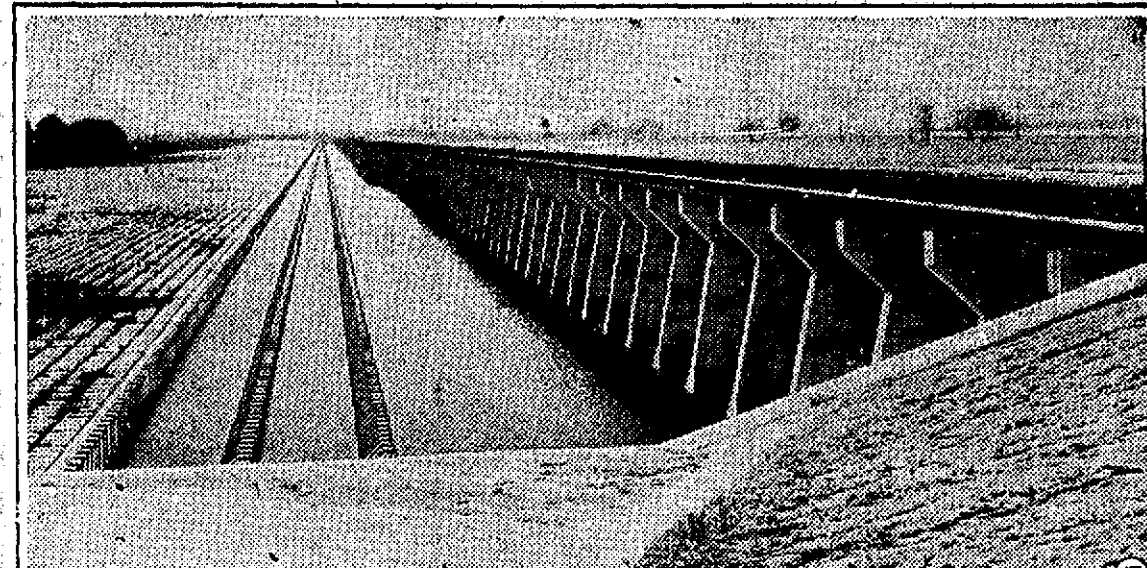

Rotates Crops
Before his corn is planted Lentz tests for germinative quality. Kernels are wrapped in wet paper and kept warm for about a week. If the corn is good the kernels sprout. If not, they rot.

Lentz rotates his crops, lends a score of dairy cattle, 100 hogs, 75 sheep, several hundred chickens and believes in purchased stock.

Although his chief business success has been with corn—he won the Indiana state championship back in 1925—Lentz doesn't care for it as a food. "I don't like it," he said. "I like cornbread once in a while but not often. And I won't eat corn on the cob."

Lentz plans to exhibit the ten ears which won him his championship once or twice this year. Next year he expects to test and plant it.

Giant Spillway Protects New Orleans From Floods

Thirty miles upstream in the Mississippi river from New Orleans is the Bonnet Carré spillway, shown above, a $6,500,000 bulwark against floods surging down the mighty stream. The spillway is 7700 feet long. It has 350 bays, each 20 feet wide, separated by 12-inch concrete piers. In each bay are "needle gates," which regulate the flow of water into Lake Pontchartrain after the flood stage of the city has reached 20 feet. A stretch of the articulated paving which helps control the flow is shown at left of the massive concrete barrier, with the specially designed paving below the dam.

But it wants some tangible proof—a postmarked envelope or letter cover bearing the stamp of the old tavern post.

If found, the relic will be placed in the museum now being set up at Pine Mountain state park.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON.—Congressmen who have been getting cross-eyed from keeping one eye on Father Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice and the other eye on the Townsends, got some comfort, but not much, from the Ohio primaries.

They got more from the defeat of the Frazier-Leinke bill, which had Coughlin's unstinted backing. One of the arguments used as a good reason for defeating the bill was to cite Coughlin's advocacy and his dictatorial attitude.

When Coughlin got into a verbal row recently with Chairman John O'Connor of the rules committee over the bill, many congressmen saw that Coughlin was fighting his battle, and sympathized with him rather than with Coughlin.

Thus it is doubtful whether Coughlin did his fellow-inflationists more harm or good by backing the Frazier-Leinke bill.

Ohio Is Fine Test
But in the Ohio primaries he provided a beautiful object lesson. Ohio was watched as a practical test of both the NUSJ and the Townsend groups at the polls. Both together would average about as strong in the state as anywhere in the country.

The political priest had chosen that citadel of his organization to make a personal appeal. At a Cleveland mass meeting just before the primary, he addressed 25,000 listeners, and broadcast a state-wide appeal for all his candidates by name.

The results almost justified the boast

British Conservatives outside the cabinet were reported to be favoring a move Saturday to settle Europe's war debt to the United States.

A discussion of the obligations which now total more than 13 billion dollars, rose on the heels of a strong statement by Leon Blum, prospective French premier.

Blum said he would like to see "the misunderstanding" over the debts eliminated.

In Paris it was indicated that the first possible move on the problem would come from London.

Clark Centennial Observed Friday

One of Original Counties When Arkansas Became a State

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—Clark county, celebrated the Arkansas centennial, its own 100 years of countyhood and Arkansas' century of progress, simultaneously here Friday.

Clark was one of the original counties when Arkansas was admitted to the Union in 1836, and Arkadelphia was getting to be a village the same year. Several thousand persons witnessed the parade and attended the pageant, while others earlier in the day were taken on a short pilgrimage to ante-bellum homes where the hostilities of the Old South were carried out in dress and custom of the old days. A museum of pioneer arts and crafts was open throughout the day.

The downtown section was decorated with Americana and Arkansas flags, bunting and streamers. Show windows were in full dress and a gala spirit dominated the scene.

Submarine Phone Used When Sunk

Sweden Announces Invention of Aid in Submarine Disasters

STOCKHOLM, Sweden.—(AP)—A submarine buoy telephone, by which a sunken craft can communicate with rescuers, has been adopted by the Swedish navy.

An ordinary telephone instrument is enclosed in a buoy that can be released to rise to the surface when a submarine is sunk by accident. The buoy, carrying telephone wires from the submarine, is equipped with a flashlight to attract attention on the water.

Another communications novelty is the "laryngophone," which receives sound impulses from the larynx of the speaker, and hence is not affected by nearby noises.

It is designed for use in such places as engine rooms and airlocks where there is so much noise that the speaker's voice would be drowned in an ordinary telephone.

Your Baby's Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Babies need exercise exactly as do adults, but of a different kind. When a small baby lies on his back and kicks, he is really having strenuous exercise. Time should be allowed every day for this activity.

Part of the time the baby should lie on his stomach and be permitted to lift his head or push himself up from the bed.

Exactly as with grown-ups, a certain amount of exercise is a stimulus to hunger and appetite in the baby, and also creates enough fatigue to make him want to rest.

Children who are flabby in the constitution of their bodies need more exercise than do those who are solidly constructed. They should also have a physical examination, however, to indicate whether they are free from rickets or malnutrition.

Violent exercise should never be permitted immediately after eating. In warm or pleasant weather, a half hour of exercise outdoors is exceedingly beneficial.

Exercise, of course, is an excellent method of training. Children learn by practice. When a boy first gets on a bicycle, he promptly falls off. With a little practice, he learns how to balance himself, co-ordinating his muscles in such manner that balance is maintained and he is able to go forward.

Especially important in getting suitable reaction to exercise is the feeling of satisfaction that comes from accomplishment. If the activity is successful and satisfying to the child, he is more likely to repeat the performance.

Children are taught much more easily during early years of life than in later years. Mentally backward children, who suffer from lack of development of the tissues and organs, will not respond promptly to exercise.

Parents often are proud of the baby and like to show his accomplishments. This leads to forcing the child before he is really ready to carry on a certain activity. It also leads to repetition of such activity for long periods of time, which results in fatigue and exhaustion.

Babies are much more easily excited than are grown-ups, and they respond more fully. Thus, a baby will be greatly excited by a large variety of toys, by a long automobile ride, or by great excitement in the people around him. Any excitement which brings about fatigue or exhaustion is bad for him.

Remember, also, that the eyes of the baby are delicate and must be protected against accident and against direct sunlight, when the child is outdoors.

In exercising the baby, remember that he is not to sit up until the muscles of the spine and neck are strong enough. When the child is able to bring his head up with the rest of the body, the mother may help him gradually to sit up. A good exercise is to permit the child's legs to bend and straighten against slight counter pressure by the mother. As soon as the baby is able to sit up, he may begin new exercises, including bending and reaching for objects above his head.

When the baby's muscles are able to bear the weight of his body, he will begin to crawl. In that stage, he should be protected suitably by a pen, or in some other manner, against being burned accidentally and against falling down stairs.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

I have a problem to solve today for one worried mother. It occurs to me that I might think it out in this column. Perhaps other mothers with 3 or 4-year-olds who can't sleep may be interested.

It appears that all ordinary methods of beguiling the Sandman have been tried in her case. But Dolly, or Lucile (the child's name was not given) still pulls the stuffing out of her doll for hours after she should have crossed the borderline of Nod.

The doctor says she "should" sleep, and finding nothing wrong physically has let it go at that. But Dolly's mother feels that there must be another answer, and I think there is.

Exercises May Be at Fault

First of all, this little girl may not be getting enough exercise. If this sounds like an old story, let me say that there is a big difference in the amount of exercise it takes to tire a child. The strong active type of child can do twice as much as the more sensitive one, and still not be physically tired. I say "sensitive" rather than "weak," because disposition has a great deal to do with fatigue.

Contrariwise, another matter has to be understood also; that a really nervous, too-high-strung child will become still more excited and wide-awake with increased exercise, especially if it is of a too stimulating nature.

Actually, the worst enemy of sleep is lack of sleep. Men in emergencies who have had to lose sleep for nights on end, reach a stage where sleep is impossible. To get themselves into condition for slumber they go fishing for a day, or go absolutely alone on a sylvan hike with only the birds for company.

The little girl in question, so it seems to me, is constantly over-excited by life itself. She over-stimulates herself. This sometimes happens with people who live in the quietest of places, and even where company is rare.

Moderate Home Conditions

I believe this may be the case with the object of my letter and the subject of this article. She very probably excites herself with very simple experiences.

If this diagnosis is right, I should do several things—that is, if she were my child. I should keep her away from people until a routine of sleep was established. Even if my own friends had to stay out of the house for a few weeks, I would make the sacrifice. Next, if there happened to be any trouble in the family, as for instance, occasional flare-ups with other members, the nervous one should be kept out of ear-shot entirely. Third, she would have exercise, but only the simplest. I should not over-burden her with talk, either, or threaten to punish her. And certainly I would never mention sleep to her. I myself would try to be calm, for nervousness or excitability is contagious. Voices, at my request, would never be raised. Household routine would run on oiled wheels, without confusion. And after regular sleep was established I should continue to practice at least three-fourths of these theories.

Also, it is illuminating, none the less. Following closely Marquis W. Childs' study of the neighboring country, Sweden, this book gives new light on the growing revelation that there are other ways of attacking economic problems than through capitalism, Communism, Fascism, or any of the popular credos of the day.

Attached firmly to the land, on which 87 per cent of its people live with an illiteracy rate of 1 per cent, compared with 43 in the United States, and with only 9 per cent of its farmers tenants as compared with our 31 per cent, Finland suggests strongly some of the roads that may be open to countries which remain devoted to the idea of widely distributed private property. Of course, the co-operative movement is strong there.

But the significant thing shown in Miss Rothery's entertaining travel picture of Finland is the way in which the Finns have gone ahead and built up their own design for living.

It seems no less successful than the designs forged in greater countries to the tune of swank, swagger, and hullo-abalo.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

Whether you think of Finland as that curious country which insists on paying its war debt to the United States, or whether you think of it in terms of the somber, defiant music of Sibeliuss, the chances are that you don't know much about it.

All too few Americans do, for in the days when most of us learned our geography, Finland was just one of those minority regions under the heel of Czarist Russia.

Now it's an independent country now, and an interesting one. You can learn a great deal about it from "Finland: The New Nation," by Agnes Rothery (Viking Press, $3).

Linda tries to help him. To please Dix, she invites BASIL THORNE, director, to her home though she dislikes and distrusts Thorne.

Peter Gardner writes a successful play and comes to Hollywood.

Thorne drives Linda to a mountain resort where the company is to begin work next day. The others fail to arrive. There is trouble with the car. Linda and Peter are obliged to stay through the night.

Thorne asks Linda to marry him she refuses.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXII

THE next time Linda travelled the road to San Jacinto it was daylight and she was with the players in her company. She would not have recognized the deserted spot where she had been forced to spend the night with Thorne. Sets had been built, new cabins made habitable, and now there was action. And she was much too busy to think again of that night.

They remained for nearly a fortnight. Linda heard nothing from Thorne, but the day she returned home he turned up unexpectedly at her apartment.

"I've missed you," he said. He said other things and when he had left Linda had the feeling that he had been trying to force her to say something—what she did not know, but her earlier feeling of disquiet awoke again.

However, she had other things to think about. Careers wax and wane with surprising swiftness in the moving picture business. Linda knew that she had reached the top, but could she stay there? Her contract would be up in two months and her company had no option. Paul Leonhardt had come out from the New York office to head Commonwealth, and changes were in the air. Linda had no reason to think her contract would not be renewed. On the other hand, she knew Leonhardt was bringing out new writers. It was difficult not to worry.

Linda had gone completely spend-thrift. She thought unappetizingly of the mountain trip, thrusting the thought into her desk. She had bought clothes recklessly, had her apartment redecorated, entertained expensively. She was suddenly appalled to realize that she spent more in a week than she had in months when she lived in Newtown. Yes, it was necessary to have her contract renewed.

It was not a comfortable time for her. The only reassuring thing was Dix's happiness. He was working in Thorne's picture, and the director liked his work, he had said. She found escape from her own worries, thinking of this and the bright future when Dix would be established and she would be his wife.

She ceased worrying about Thorne in her anxiety over her contract and would have forgotten the incident entirely had she not found herself at Andre Allen's party, discussing the mountain sequence of the picture they had finished making that day.

"I left the day before the last scenes were shot," Linda said in answer to some question.

Honey Harmon was in that little group. She stabbed an olive in her glass and raised wide eyes to Linda's face.

"You mean the week before, don't you?" she asked quietly.

Linda couldn't quite adjust herself. Had that been a slip on Honey's part? It was a week before that she and Thorne . . . All manner of things jumbled in Linda's mind. Honey! Thorne! Cossip! Thorne's promise or had it been a promise? But Honey and Thorne had not seen each other . . . Honey and Pete Gardner. . . Linda gave up.

"Don't you think it's wonderfully interesting out there?" Honey asked.

"It was interesting making the picture. I don't know anything much about the country around there and had little chance to see it; we worked from six in the morning until midnight."

"It's interesting at night," Honey looked boldly and meaningfully at Linda's face now and spaced her words slowly. "I understand it's thrilling when you're . . . alone."

THERE was no mistaking her now. Somehow, this girl who had hated Linda because Linda had kept Pete Gardner from her long ago, then taken Thorne from her, knew that she and Thorne had spent the night there.

Linda had to know how. She had to find Thorne. She telephoned his home, the studio, his clubs. At last she learned he was at Santa Monica, and could not be reached. Linda knew that she must discover if he were responsible, and make him stop the rumors.

Perhaps Honey was the only one who knew, and if Honey did talk what weight would her stories carry? Her listeners would be wise enough to know that the gossip was malicious and remember that Linda had been a rival of the beloved star on more than one occasion.

But if she thought Honey was the only one to talk about her, Linda was mistaken. The girls in Hollywood were no different from the girls in Newtown, Keokuk, Des Moines or any other place where one popular girl, lacking a free and easy manner, is often mistaken for a snob. Since Linda gave little thought to people who did not interest her, it had not occurred to her that they might have been thinking of her. Or that they would be only too glad to pounce on a fallen angel.

ESTHER ROWELL, the famous old character actress, was one of Linda's best friends, and it was from her that Linda again heard about the night she wanted never to remember again.

"I don't believe a word of it," Mrs. Rowell told her. "Or if it is true that you spent the night with Thorne, I am sure the circumstances were accidental and entirely innocent. I don't think you are a fool in any way. And I don't think you have bad taste. Don't make any explanation to me if you don't wish to, but if it isn't true, you must stop it. I've been hearing it about, and it is my impression that Thorne started it himself."

"It isn't true," Linda said through set lips. "And I'm sure it must have come from some other source. I can't imagine Mr. Thorne giving any such information. Why, he has asked me to marry him!"

"Men without principle have been known to do strange things to force ladies to arrive at proper conclusions."

Linda couldn't believe that of Thorne. In her code when a man thought enough of a woman to ask her to marry him, he did not jeopardize her reputation.

She got in her roadster and drove to Santa Monica. She found Basil Thorne leaning on the set, and asked him to join her in her car. They drove to a deserted spot and Linda brought the car to a stop with shrieking brakes. She didn't waste any words.

"Basil, someone knows and has told that you and I spent that night in the mountains. I want you to find out who it is and stop him by denying the rumor."

"So you've decided to marry me?" he asked softly.

Surprised, she turned to look at him quickly. He was smiling. "Of course not. That has nothing to do with this situation."

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD.—A sudden flurry of Civil War films has brightened the face of a tall, gaunt man who lives on a side street in Hollywood. He's Frank McGlynn, the movies' Lincoln.

McGlynn impersonated the martyred president on the stage, too. Off and on, he has played the same role for 16 years—probably a record for a single part, except for William Gillette's impersonations of Sherlock Holmes.

McGlynn's recitations of the Gettysburg address are countless in his memory. And he has been assassinated over and over again. The resemblance to Lincoln is astonishing, even without the false whiskers and dummy mole which complete his makeup for acting.

Calls to don his Lincolnian accessories are infrequent, though, and McGlynn fills out his time with small parts as an ordinary Hollywood character actor. During the last few months he has been having a much better time of it. Lincoln has been in demand.

He played the role with Shirley Temple in "The Littlest Rebel." He was Lincoln again in "The Prisoner of Shark Island." And now he is Lincoln in a picture being shot at Warner's—"On Secret Service." It's the busiest he has been in a long time.

Early Defeats

Lean years of struggling to support his wife and six children qualified McGlynn for his Lincoln roles, he believes. "Those years were full of privation and sorrow and defeats," he recalls. "All good experience, as things turned out. One must know those things if one is to understand Lincoln."

He was born in San Francisco 59 years ago, studied law, but deserted the bar for the stage. His height won him his first role, as the Indian in "The Gold Bug." About all he had to do was yell. After six yells, the play closed.

Subsequently, he played more than 150 roles, none of them important. He married Rose O'Byrne, an actress, in 1900.

"As the children came along, my fortunes continued to go down," he said.

Traveling Salesman

"After the earthquake in San Francisco, I got a horse and buggy and drove around selling cement to builders. Back in New York conditions were even worse. In 1909 I went with the old Edison Film Co. as a director. We were producing the original Rex Beach pictures then."

He toured the world with the Giants and White Sox in 1913-14, in charge of the motion pictures. He was the first person to get movies of the late King George, during a game between the American teams in London in 1914.

From 1919 On

In 1919 there was a wide search for an actor to portray Abraham Lincoln in John Drinkwater's great play of that title. McGlynn heard about it, applied, and won the role. It was the peak of his career, for he appeared on Broadway for two solid years, and later on the road.

Fresh from that triumph, he came to Hollywood, and has managed to hold exclusive screen rights to Lincoln impersonations ever since.

He's pretty lucky, he admits, because there are 84 other recognized impersonators scattered about the country, and they all have tried to crash the movies.

If We Had But a Day

We should fill the hours with the sweetest thoughts.
If we had but a day:
springs
In our upward way:
We should love with a lifetime's love
We should drink alone at the purest in an hour
If the hours were few:
We should rest, not for dreams, but for fresher power
To be and do.
We should waste no moments in weak regret.
If the day were but one:
If what we remember and what we forget
Went out with the sun:
We should be from our clamorous
selves set free
To work or to pray,
And to be what the Father would have us to be,
If we had but a day.—Selected.

Proceeding the delightful luncheon, the guests had the privilege of viewing Mrs. Scoggins' lovely flower garden, which was certainly a feast of beauty, with its graceful arrangement, and natural landscaping, and a profusion of lovely flowers, adding their colorful beauty to this attractive setting. The tempting luncheon was served on small tables, centered with crystal baskets of pink and white. Arroyals. The room decorations were gorgeous bouquets and baskets of Madonna lilies and pink roses, it was indeed a most charming setting for one of the most enjoyable meetings in the history of the chapter. ## "Petticoat Fever" New Saenger Film

Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy Here Sunday, Monday, Tuesday

A new and potent starring team heads the cast of the sprightly comedy, "Petticoat Fever," coming Sunday, Monday and Tuesday to the Saenger. The team is Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy, and this is their first picture since the memorable "When Ladies Meet," each having gone far in popular popularity since then.

Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy in "Petticoat Fever"

It is a story of a wireless operator in a remote Labrador station. When an airplane runs out of gasoline and lands near his lonely tower he sees a white woman for the first time in a year, and a beautiful woman for the first time since he left England, two years before.

By refusing to send their messages, he holds the couple, who are engaged, virtual prisoners, meanwhile making love to the lady but with such charm and grace that she begins to like it. His future seems rosy until a girl to whom he was engaged two years before appears, confidently ready to marry him. The ensuing complication leads to a smashing surprise finish.

Reginald Owen, ranking character actor, plays the English baronet engaged to Myrna Loy. Others in the supporting cast are William Stack, Otto Yamaoka, Iris Yamaoka and Bo Ching.

the local Cleveland Democratic organization, which had the poor judgment to pit against Sweeney a particularly obnoxious stuffed shirt with one foot already in his political grave.

Congressman Robert Crosser, who had NUSI, but not Townsend, backing, came through easily, but Crosser again is a special case, with an intensely loyal personal following.

While he favors many NUSI ideas, Crosser resolutely refused to sign the pledge to vote as Father Coughlin directs, which is usually required in exchange for NUSI support.

Though personally importuned by the father himself, Crosser refused to put his name on the dotted line. He got the endorsement anyway.

Count About Even

In two Ohio districts, both candidates in November will carry the Coughlin imprimatur. Three incumbents were swept out, largely by Coughlin opposition, Congressman Feisinger of Sandusky, Duffy of Toledo, and Hunter of Akron.

Twelve victories, six defeat in the Democratic primary, and three victories, 11 defeats in the Republican, was the NUSI box score.

The lesson appears to be this: when both Coughlinites and Townsends, the followers of their widely diverse plans united by a general feeling of discontent, go after a stuffed shirt set up by a discredited local political machine, the stuffing is likely to get knocked out of the shirt.

Leche Wants Peace

Very quietly, one of the thorns in the flesh of the Roosevelt administration is being withdrawn. The threat of Huey Long to alienate a great part of the traditionally Democratic south, was a very real one. His death partly checked that.

But the new governor, Richard W. Leche, just inaugurated, has given every indication that he wants no feuds with Washington. Pledged to carry on Huey's work in Louisiana,

Sheriff Candidate 'Shoots' His Way

His Wife Is Target as Sheriff Shows Off Dexterity With Guns

LIMA, Ohio.—(AP)—Ralph S. Marshall is waging a two-gun campaign for re-election as sheriff of Allen county.

At grange meetings, picnics and other gatherings of the electorate he puts on a William Tell act that wows his public.

Here is his campaign technique: Mrs. Marshall stands 10 paces away with two paper discs wired to her head a few inches from her ears. Marshall, with a revolver in each hand, fires simultaneously, the bullets piercing each disc.

Mrs. Marshall then smokes a cigarette. Her husband shoots it from her mouth.

Obviously little concerned, Mrs. Marshall says she does not mind the shooting in the least. She is a crack shot herself. "I've watched my husband put 50 shots inside a small black ring; I've seen him shoot so often I'm not at all afraid," she explained.

The sheriff, who has practiced shooting daily since 1927, says he never has any trouble getting someone to take his wife's place when she can not appear.

When he made his first campaign, two years ago, Sheriff Marshall startled the county with its novelty. He made no speeches, but did lots of shooting and was elected by a big majority.

he has nevertheless given every indication that he is more than willing that the Crooke state re-enter the Roosevelt fold.

ARKANSAS CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

OUR STATE IS OUR EXPOSITION

On June 15, 1936, Arkansas will be one hundred years old! On that day President Andrew Jackson signed the bill which officially made the territory of Arkansas the twenty-fifth of the United States. The Centennial Commission desires to know the names of all Arkansas people, whose birthdays also fall upon June 15.

Were You Born On June 15? If So, Send Us Your Name

Why not celebrate the birthday of all Arkansas who were born on June 15 at the same time we celebrate the birth of Arkansas herself?

The Hope Star is joining with other Arkansas newspapers in efforts to see that this is done; to see that special notice is given to the birth anniversary of everyone living in the state who first saw light on the same day of the Month that President Andrew Jackson officially made Arkansas a state one hundred years ago.

So, if you were born on June 15, send us your name. You needn't say what year you were born unless you want to. We hope to publish between now and June 15 the names of all our readers whose birth can be celebrated jointly with the birth of our State.

Fad-a-minute—Hollywood now offers the latest in spring, pre-breakfast exercises. Youngsters most certainly have heard of it before—it's roller-skating, and it's especially nice if a beautiful girl, clad in shorts, glides by your side, as Jackie Coogan and his fiancée, Betty Grable, demonstrate.

A Good Laugh For

other places where they gather. Through he jokes pulled upon the unsuspecting runs a vein of hearty humor. Many a good story originated on the trail or in a camp. Others grew out of some incident. Some have been recounted in these columns before. Here's one on the home team:

While whipping a backwoods stream in full fly-fishing regalia we were conscious of someone watching, and after pering into the brush discovered a youngster about 9 years old, clad in ragged overalls.

"Any luck, mister?"
"No luck, son."

Several minutes' silence and then: "You know what you look like?"
"No, son. What?"
"A Christmas tree."

A Bird Dog Yarn

There was an inexperienced chap who bought 3500 worth of guns and equipment. The sporting goods dealer, happy over the sale, loaned him a bird dog.

On his return the dealer asked how the dog behaved, and the embryo huntsman replied: "Not so good at first. He would run around in the weeds, then seem to freeze up and stand stiff. But I booted him three or four times and he got over the habit."

Another yarn concerns a well-known American lawyer who liked to fish for muskies in the Lake of the Woods region. His newly purchased and highly prized bamboo rod developed a "bend." To make matters worse, his guide told him the manufacturer was then in the vicinity.

"Lead me to him," the barrister yelled, "I want to wrap this around his — neck."

Most of us have heard big game hunters tell how they bagged such and such an animal running at 300 yards. This feat always worried us a great deal, especially when we were young. One time a bush Indian came into camp and offered this explanation:

"No shoot that far. Hunter say, here 10 dollar, you kill mouse if him miss. Me get him close."

And he exhibited an antiquated rifle that looked like something Hudson's Bay company passed out to the boys in the palmy days of the fur trade.

Changed His Mind

The old trapper liked to boast about his dog.

"Jist last night he fit and kilt the biggest dang 'coon I ever see in 70 years," he told his cronies at the cross-roads store. "Got his skin stretched out on my shack. Hit's that long."

(With his arms he indicated a distance of about four feet.)

A few days later a warden got him for having fur out of season.

"And fined me, too," he wailed, "for taking a leetle, old 'coon pelt not that long." (With his hands he measured off approximately 12 inches).

Years ago folks in the White river country maintained communication by the hilltop yelling system. The guide on a float trip climbed a bluff near camp one evening and the following conversation echoed across the highlands:

Guide: "O-o-o-h Jaw-n-n."
Voice from distance: "Yeah?"
Guide: "Grandma's dead."
Voice: "The hell she is!"
Guide: "Yep. Cold as a wagon tire."

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

LINER BOUGHT WITH COAL

ITALY built the new Polish liner, Pilsudski, and got for it, not gold, but a medium of barter that is even more valuable to the Italians—coal.

The purchase inaugurated Poland's entry into modern trans-Atlantic travel. From the new Polish seaport of Gdynia, the Pilsudski now speeds to New York in 8 1/2 days. The trip formerly required 12 days. The ship is a twin Diesel-motored express liner, with gyroscopic equipment and other modern travel features. It is 514 feet long, displaces 16,000 tons, and accommodates about 800 passengers.

On the Pilsudski's initial trip from Gdynia to New York, in September, 1935, Poland issued a special stamp picturing the liner. It is shown below.

PRAIRIE DOGS

ARE NOT DOGS AT ALL, BUT RODENTS/ THEY INHABIT TREELESS AREAS OF THE WESTERN UNITED STATES, WHERE THEY LIVE IN BURROWS OF GREAT DEPTH. THE MAIN SHAFT OF THE BURROW DESCENDS STRAIGHT DOWN SOME FIFTEEN FEET BEFORE BRANCHING INTO VARIOUS SIDE GALLERIES.

FOR MANY YEARS, IT WAS BELIEVED, ERRONEOUSLY, THAT PRAIRIE DOGS SHARED THEIR BURROWS WITH OWLS AND RATTLESNAKES/ THEY DO INHABIT THE SAME AREAS, BUT NEVER THE SAME HOLE.

A CRATER SURROUNDS THE TOP OF THE HOLE, AS A PROTECTION AGAINST WATER DURING HEAVY RAINS.

THE ANIMALS LIVE IN "TOWNS" MADE UP OF HUNDREDS OF INDIVIDUALS/ ONE KANSAS DOG TOWN EXTENDED A HUNDRED MILES THROUGH THE STATE.

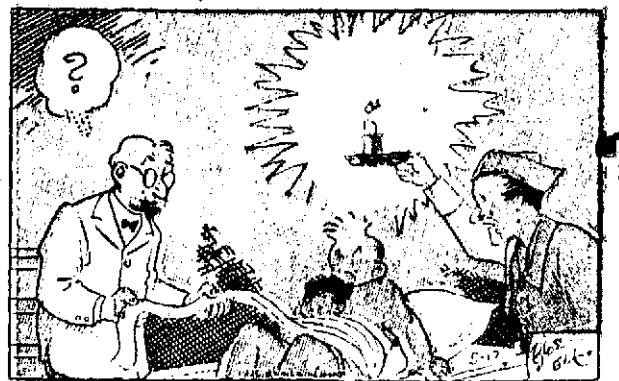

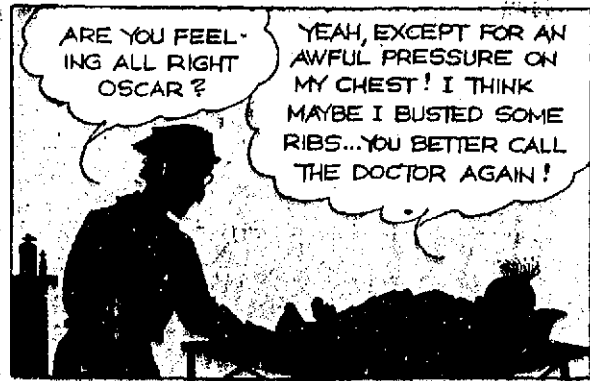

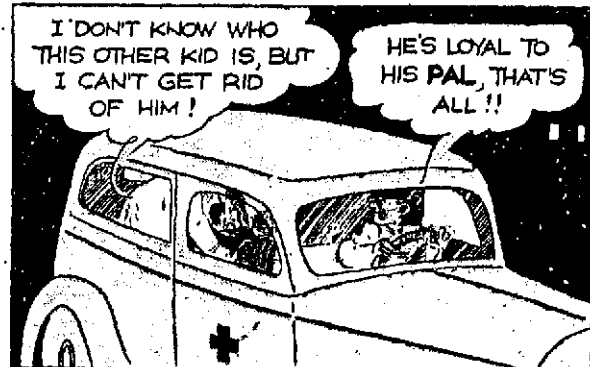

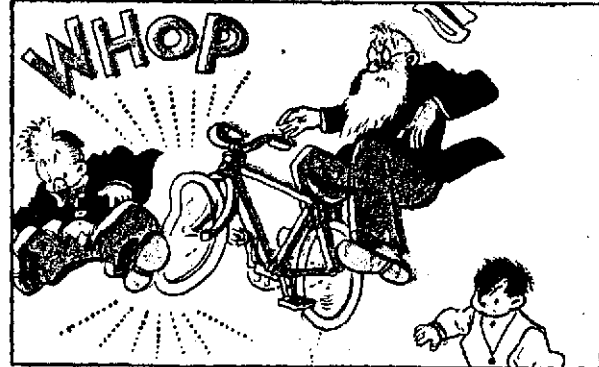

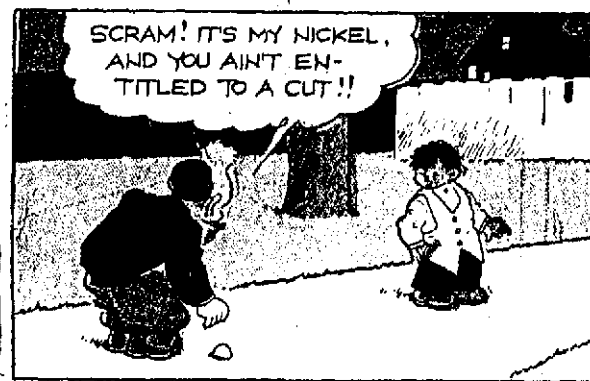

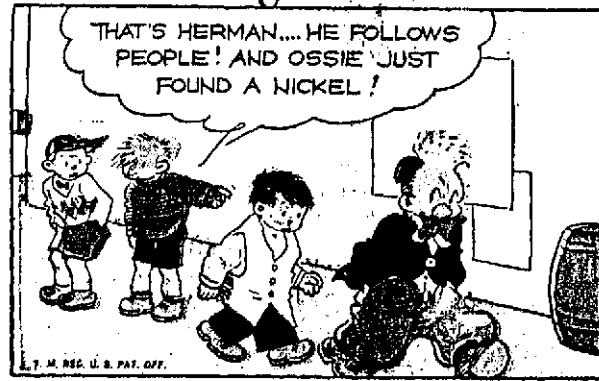

THE PRAIRIE DOG'S CHIEF ENEMIES ARE COYOTES, FERRETS, SNAKES AND, MOST DANGEROUS OF ALL, MAN/ BUT MAN MUST RESORT TO POISON, IN ORDER TO COMBAT THE WISE LITTLE DOGS SUCCESSFULLY.

THE RECONSTRUCTION PRESENTED BELOW IS THAT OF A SMALL RHINOCEROS, QUITE COMMON ON THIS CONTINENT ABOUT TWENTY MILLION YEARS AGO. MANY SCIENTISTS ADVANCE THE THEORY THAT RHINOCEROS HAS REACHED THE END OF ITS EVOLUTION AND WILL SHORTLY BECOME EXTINCT AS A SPECIES. WHILE THE RHINOCEROS OF TODAY ARE FOUND IN AFRICA AND PORTIONS OF INDIA, THE CENTER OF RHINOCEROS DISTRIBUTION APPEARS TO HAVE BEEN NORTH AMERICA.
